Lab 7 Self Reflection
10/14/2026

This lab made the distinction between a working technology and a ready organization clearer. The manufacturing case had a sponsor and a pilot budget, but no continuing owner for the digital twin. That missing responsibility mattered more than a general statement that the organization was interested in innovation.

The stronger and weaker profiles changed the readiness conclusion without changing the need to validate the model. I want to keep those judgments tied to the supplied facts rather than produce a generic management checklist. I wonder how the team's intake can capture who will maintain the system after the pilot without assuming that a named person already has the time or skills.
